BNP on target to win GLA seats

THE BATTLE FOR LONDON HAS BEGUN

by Nick Eriksen

THE Labour Party, the Conservatives and the Liberal Democrats in London are all desperate to prevent the British National Party from winning seats on the London Assembly in May.

London Mayor 'Red' Ken Livingstone, and the Tory Mayoral candidate Boris 'the buffoon' Johnson are united in their fear that Londoners will vote to elect one or even two BNP London Assembly members. Livingstone said back in September that it would take a major reversal in the electoral fortunes of the Party not to win a GLA seat, while Johnson even tabled an 'Early Day Motion' in the House of Commons stating:

"This House notes that in May 2008 there is a possibility that at least two members of the British National Party (BNP) will gain a seat on the London Assembly, and that as things currently stand there is a grave risk of these two members of the BNP having a deciding vote on the Mayor's budget;

This House believes that this is a potentially disastrous situation in which a future Mayor of any party could depend on BNP support to pass his budget;

This House calls upon all politicians for all parties to denounce the BNP in London and to work together to combat anyone who seeks to play the race card on London politics and further calls upon the Government to use its powers to combat this very real threat."

Nick Griffin speaks at the Oxford Union

LABOUR Party thugs failed to stop the leader of the British National Party from speaking at the prestigious Oxford Union debating society despite being given a 'free hand' to cause mayhem by senior officers of Thames Valley Police. Nick Griffin was philosophical about the failed attempt to stop his address: "I was able to speak at the Oxford Union and that is what is important. We expect this sort of behaviour from our opponents in their desperation to stop the public hearing what the British National Party has to say." But another speaker at the event - Evan Harris, the Liberal Democrat MP for Oxford West and Abingdon - was shocked at the ferocity of the protesters. He accused the police of "outrageous" failures in containing the anti-BNP demonstration and for failing to stop protesters infiltrating into the debating hall. He said: "The police failed to provide for the safety of this event. They did not create a cordon around the Union and they allowed the protesters to climb over the walls."

Despite the protest, most of the sell-out audience of 500 managed to gain access to the hall and hear Nick Griffin speak on immigration, libel laws and the public perception of the British National Party. On the protesters outside, he said: "This is a mob which would kill. I have seen them beat old men and women. Had they grown up in Nazi Germany they would have made splendid Nazis."

Luke Tryl, the president of the Oxford Union Debating Society, who had to run the gauntlet of demonstrators chanting "Kill Tryl", said of them: "I don't think they do their cause any favours by inciting violence."

EVAN HARRIS: Shocked at the ferocity of the anti-BNP protesters.

Righteous anger & political action

THE British National Party believes in telling the truth, even when it is sometimes uncomfortable to hear or even offensive to those who would rather bury their heads in the sand than face up to the problems in our society. But while we often pass critical comment on the impact of mass immigration, multi-culturalism and even foreign religions on the indigenous people of our lands, we have no animosity towards immigrants, their descendants or the followers of non-native religions. Nor do we intend to encourage others to feel such animosity, or believe that anything we have to say is likely to 'stir up hatred' against anyone. In fact, we believe that by providing a peaceful and constitutional outlet for the anger and frustration felt by millions of our people over the undemocratic transformation of our country by our political masters, the British National Party actually defuses tensions. Where there is 'hate' we seek to turn it into righteous anger and political action against the only people who deserve to be hated - the politicians who use our taxes to turn our country into a place where we often feel like strangers in our own land.

Defence cuts spent on 'Fat Cat' salaries

BITAIN'S armed services are facing further cuts in funding, yet all the while the Government is squandering vast sums of money on bosses in the public sector.

As a result of a £2 billion black hole of under-funding discovered in the defence budget, all the Armed Services are to be forced to suffer further cuts next year.

But huge outlays remain committed, in many cases to programmes related more to currying favour with the US and the EU than protecting the British people. For example £1.7 billion for the Trident missile programme, which is falsely portrayed as 'Britain's independent nuclear deterrent', when in fact it cannot be used without US permission, and £1.2 billion for the useless 'Typhoon' Eurofighter.

Defence Minister Lord Drayson, was able to resign to extricate himself from the mess, but there's no such get out for our under-equipped servicemen fighting on two fronts in Iraq and Afghanistan.

But while our Government couldn't find the money to equip the soldiers, sailors and airmen it sends to die in George Bush's wars, it has plenty of cash to dole out to the overpaid desk-jockeys who run its vast public sector bureaucracy.

Three hundred top public sector hacks each earned more than £150,000 of taxpayers' money last year. The fattest cat was Adam Crozier, Chief Executive of Royal Mail, who pocketed a cool £1,256,000 of public money in 2006. He cancelled the second postal delivery and increased the price of stamps. This was a 21% pay rise, ten times the annual rise received by the postmen and women he drove to strike action. His deputy at Royal Mail, Ian Griffiths, got £971,000.

Top bosses at Network Rail are netting over £800,000 a year each - and that's something worth remembering next time your train is running late!

Ten bureaucrats organising the 2012 Olympics are on over £150,000 a year, with the top suit, David Higgins on £631,000 a year.

Peter Hendy, the Transport for London boss earns £1,000 every four hours - something else to ponder when you are stuck on one of his overcrowded Tube trains.

The 82 highest paid NHS officials each earn over £150,000 a year.

The Chief Executive of the Financial Services Authority, John Tiner, got a 14% pay rise to £652,977 last year and that will rankle those queuing outside Northern Rock branches trying to withdraw their hard-earned savings..

Whilst this obscenely-paid herd grunt and jostle at the publicly-funded trough, British squaddies are sent to die in Afghanistan for a paltry £16,000 a year.

It is not exactly clear what Boris Johnson means by asking the Government to "use its powers" to combat the BNP? In a democracy an elected Government should combat its political opponents with ideas and policies, not by using state power. It's a strange proposal to come from London's leading Conservative, a Party which is always claiming to stand up for freedom of choice. Clearly the reality is that Boris Johnson is not quite as cuddly as he would like us to think and there is really no difference between him and 'Red' Ken Livingstone.

The significance of this is that the outcome of the London Assembly elections worries our opponents so much because it is conducted on the basis of proportional representation, which means that if the British National Party polls 5% of the vote it will win one seat, and 8% will see two BNP representatives elected.

Back in 2004 the BNP missed out on a London Assembly seat by a few thousand votes, and the Party's credible 4.71% share of the vote was gained despite a significant vote for the then media-puffed UKIP, and before the Barking & Dagenham BNP political earthquake in May 2006. Since the last London Assembly Elections, the British National Party vote across the capital has increased significantly and all the indications are that the BNP is on course for a dramatic breakthrough.

The British National Party's campaign in London will tell voters that they have the choice between only two parties on May 1st. They can cast their vote for the Lab/Con/Lib-Dem Party of failure, sleaze and oppression or the new BNP representing the only hope for a better Britain.

Lib-Dem leader caught red-handed

A COMPLAINT by the British National Party against Michael Wyatt, the Liberal Democrat leader on North West Leicestershire County Council, for delivering 'Third Party' anti-BNP leaflets during the Ibstock Ward by-election has been acted upon by the council's Returning Officer. Wyatt was caught red-handed by a BNP canvassing team and photographed going about his illicit business which is in clear breach of election law.

Returning Officer Margaret Taylor, wrote to BNP councillor Ian Meller: "I confirm that I saw the councillor concerned this afternoon and that he has verbally agreed that he and other members of his political group will not circulate any more of the leaflets in question.

"I told him that the Electoral Commission had advised that you send them a copy of the leaflet to consider whether it would be a Liberal Democrat election expense which he accepted.

"I also told him that myself and the Chief Executive would be considering whether to refer the leaflet to the police for them to consider whether there was any breach of the criminal law."

Wayne McDermott, the BNP's campaign manager for the Ibstock by-election, was pleased that action was being taken. He told Freedom: "I think it proves that taking photographs when illegal election activities are being undertaken by the other parties and going to the council is worthwhile. This is the second complaint we have put in against the same councillor in a few weeks and both have been upheld."

BNP exposes Tory green belt sell-off in Havering

EXPOSED: Havering BNP make sure the borough's residents know of the Tories plans to sell-off local green belt land. The signs were later removed by council workmen in a desperate effort to keep the public in the dark.

by Nick Eriksen

IN THE London Borough of Havering support for the British National Party is most definitely on the increase.

One issue in particular on which the BNP stance is proving popular is the campaign against the sell-off of green belt land by the Tory council for housing development.

Parks and play areas in Romford,

Collier Row and Hornchurch are already under threat but this is the tip of the iceberg with the council wanting 10,000 new houses built by 2020. Residents from Abbs Cross Lane approached the BNP for assistance when their elected councillors refused to help them in their battle with the local authority.

Local British National Party activists quickly engaged the services of a solicitor and launched a petition on the Downing Street website.

They also found that the land under threat is home to many kingfishers which are a protected species, providing another issue for the campaign. A local petition collected 3,000 signatures in just five days and to inform the public what was going on, large banners were set up on the site condemning the Tories for selling off the land.

The council was so embarrassed by these BNP banners exposing its plans to remove it! But undeterred, Havering BNP immediately put up news ones and reported the theft of the others to the police.

A BNP leaflet was then delivered across the borough making the Party's stance on the issue crystal clear:

"Havering BNP will not stand by and allow our green belt land to be concreted over in order to alleviate the pressure on housing brought about by unrestricted immigration. We will actively oppose this wilful destruction of our environment by Havering's Tory councillors, aided and abetted by the inactivity of the useless Havering Residents' Association opposition."

BACK AGAIN: Havering BNP campaigners Mark Logan and wife Sally, with a team of helpers, replaced the signs taken down by the council.

BNP councillor opens Community Centre

by Colin Auty

AT the beginning of last month I had the pleasure of opening Thornhill Lees Senior Citizens' Community Centre.

Residents had asked me to help with its refurbishment and now I'm sorting out flowers and shrubs in the garden. I suppose it was because I had helped, and done so without contacting the local newspaper to gain some cheap publicity, that I was asked back to open the centre.

I took along my wife Susan and my two young daughters and we were made most welcome by the people there. Unlike most local politicians who leave as soon as the cameras have clicked, we spent two hours chatting to the majority of folk there. And it wasn't because of their votes either as it wasn't my ward in Dewsbury East, it was the ward next door in Dewsbury South, adjacent to Savile Town. Two elderly ladies there asked if I could help them with issues worrying them and that is what I'm doing at the moment.

In my speech I explained how down the years I had worked at elderly folks' houses, and had seen them sit by the window all day just giving up on life, and how places like the community centre I was opening were beneficial to them. I told them:

"Come next spring in the garden there will be flowers starting to bloom. It will be a wonderful place for you to sit and chat in a safe environment right next to your centre".

COLIN AUTY: BNP councillor for Dewsbury East on Kirklees Council.

BATTRAM: Local residents have had to endure an illegal travellers' camp for over two and a half years since it suddenly appeared on Wood Lane.

BNP stops new traveller sites in Coalville

by Wayne McDermott

THANKS to a campaign by the British National Party which included Whitwick BNP councillor Ian Meller, addressing a packed public meeting, proposals for THREE new traveller transit camps in Coalville in Leicestershire have been refused planning permission.

Nearly 1400 questionnaires on the proposed site, together with 140 letters of objection and 3 petitions against the sites were presented to the county council. Both BNP District Councillors - Graham Partner for Hugglescote and Ian Meller for Whitwick - were present at county hall as residents from all over North West Leicestershire joined in the protest.

The local British National Party is now calling for the police to get tough on illegal camp sites. In Leicester itself, travellers are moved on within days, yet when they move outside of the city limits nothing happens. This lack of action makes it an attractive area for travellers to come to.

In Battram, local residents have had to endure an illegal travellers' camp for over two and a half years since it suddenly appeared on Wood Lane.

Now the camp even gets letters delivered and has its own postcode. Despite being an illegal site it has been provided with running water, toilets and wheelie bins.

The BNP wants such illegal sites closed down and for the police to start using the powers they have, and for which local taxpayers pay, to move the travellers on.

BNP saves green belt land in Halifax

A BRITISH National Party campaign to stop the sell-off of green belt land for housing development. The local BNP group put out a leaflet in the area warning residents of the proposed development to build 16 houses on the land in Riley Lane.

In December BNP officials attended a council planning committee meeting at Halifax Town Hall to voice Illingworth ward residents' opposition to the proposals.

Prospective Illingworth & Mixenden BNP candidate Tom Bates, told local residents who had turned up en-masse at the Town Hall:

"We are very happy to tell you that the application has been defeated. The BNP will oppose any further plans to build on green belt land in Halifax." After the meeting Tom was thanked by residents for the BNP's help in campaigning and defeating the planning application.

RILEY LANE: Green belt land saved by the BNP from being concreted over.

BNP will pick up London UKIP votes

ANOTHER senior London politician has joined Ken Livingstone and Boris Johnson to raise the prospect of the British National Party securing seats on the London Assembly at next year's GLA elections.

Labour Assembly Member Murad Qureshi, has revealed that the BNP was just 0.1% away from winning a seat in the 2004 elections and he warns that the Party are on the verge of a major breakthrough. According to Mr Qureshi the BNP's vote "was highest in areas where the UK Independence Party (UKIP) was also popular."

"There are fears that as many as 20% of UKIP voters could switch to the BNP," he said.

● Murad Qureshi.

Taxpayers foot the bill for the latest equality quango bash

THE Labour Government's latest anti-British superquango, the so-called 'Equality and Human Rights Commission' (EHRC) has blown more than £50,000 of taxpayers' money on a series of banquets to celebrate its formation. The EHRC came into existence from the merger of the Equal Opportunities Commission, the Disability Rights Commission and the rabidly anti-white Commission for Racial Equality. One party to celebrate the merger involved more than 100 people being treated to a dinner and free bar at Manchester's luxury Midland Hotel. But the sheer extravagance of the Manchester evening was dwarfed by an incredible £35,000 spent on a similar celebration in London where more than 600 guests were entertained at the taxpayers' expense. The EHRC is headed by Trevor Phillips whose past contributions to 'Human Rights' have included demanding that PLUSH: Manchester's Midland Hotel.

BNP members be hounded out of their jobs in the public sector. Just as the communist German Democratic Republic was not democratic, and the Peoples' Republic of China is not run by its people - so the Equality and Human Rights Commission has very little to do with either equality or human rights. The ECHR's remit seems to extend only as far as the 'right' to silence any opposition and the 'right' to waste massive amounts of public money on extravagant dinner parties!

Now it's black teachers who receive preferential treatment

CELEBRITIES: Queuing up to appear at the Black Child Conference - Mica Paris, Kwame Kwei Armah, Lord Adonis and Diane Abbott.

A new network offering support, guidance and career advice to black teachers in London was launched at the London Schools and the Black Child Conference held at the Queen Elizabeth Conference Centre in December.

Under discussion were the inequalities in educational attainment by children of African Caribbean heritage and Ken Livingstone's Black Teachers in London report which revealed that many black teachers claimed they faced prejudice in schools and lacked help in their career development. The guest speakers were Lord Adonis, Minister for Schools and Learners, Mayor Ken Livingstone, Diane Abbott MP, actor and playwright Kwame Kwei Armah and television presenter Mica Paris.

The event also included workshops on Pupil Exclusions; Supporting Black Teachers; Listening to and Empowering Young People; The London Youth Offer; Ethnic Minority Achievement in Schools; and Mentoring and Supporting. Admission to the conference was free so it was left to London's taxpayers to foot the bill for this latest round of positive discrimination initiatives in favour of the capitals rapidly growing immigrant population

Labour MP unclear as to public opinion on immigration

EIGHT British National Party members from Broxtowe attended a Labour Party 'debate' on asylum in Nottingham with John McDonnell MP for Hayes & Harlington and Broxtowe MP Nick Palmer, proposing the case for continued asylum but with no one allowed to argue against it.

Proceedings were delayed when it was proposed that the meeting was postponed because of the BNP members present but in the end it went ahead.

"Asylum seekers were portrayed as heroes by the two Labour MPs for undertaking epic journeys to get to Britain," Broxtowe BNP organiser Nina Brown, told Freedom.

But she said that the revelation of the evening was Nick Palmer's confusion on the immigration issue. He said that he acknowledged that it was an important issue which concerned the public but was unsure whether this was because there was too much immigration into Britain, or not enough!

What planet can the Labour MP for Broxtowe have been living on?

Committee admits bias for ethnic doctors on NHS merit awards

ONE of Britain's top medical advisers has attacked the bias against White doctors in the award of bonuses to consultants by the National Health Service.

David Rosin, a former Vice-President of the Royal College of Surgeons and President of the Association for Cancer Surgery, denounced the blatant discrimination in the bonus awards at the end of last year.

Just retired from a senior London consultant's post, Mr Rosin informed his profession's magazine Hospital Doctor of the discrepancy. He said:

"It is time someone spoke up concerning the discrimination against White doctors with respect to merit awards. In the politically correct environment in which we live, there is now definitely reverse discrimination".

This discrimination matters because about half of Britain's 33,000 consultants receive an NHS merit award of some kind, ranging from £2850 to £73,158. The NHS spends over £250 million a year on the scheme.

The Medical Director of the NHS Committee which decides who gets the awards confirmed the Committee had indeed been actively trying to promote ethnic minority candidates for the awards. At the expense, therefore of the White consultants.

And the name of the Medical Director of the Award Committee? Why it just happens to be one Hamid Ghodse. Now why isn't that a surprise?

Homes for Africans in Coventry

ACCORDING to a report by Coventry City Council, social housing allocation for the native British in the city has been cut from 82% in 2002 to 67% in 2006. At the same time the allocation for Africans, who made up just 0.6% of the population in 2001, has increased to 14.1% of the social housing stock lets.

No figures were available for the length of time British people were expected to stay on the waiting list but the council acknowledged that because of the increased quota, newly arrived Africans were able to get housing virtually on demand.

Labour fraudster keeps seat and bonus allowance

A LABOUR councillor who was convicted of benefit fraud has been allowed to keep his St Mary's ward seat on Oldham Council.

He will also continue to act as a 'community champion' and will be paid a special allowance to make him the most senior councillor for his ward.

Ali Aqeel Salamat was found guilty of falsely claiming council tax benefits while working as a taxi driver.

Salamat was originally a Liberal Democrat councillor but then decided to become an Independent. He switched his allegiance again, this time to the Labour Party when it needed just one more seat for an overall majority.

Oldham magistrates fined Salamat £1,000, and ordered him to pay £500 in costs and £295 back to the council.

A spokesman for the Standards Board for England said they could not investigate the matter as they had not received any complaint.

Murders in London

MOST murders in London over the past 12 months have been committed by immigrants.

55% of the murder suspects detained in the capital were foreign, in the main arriving in Britain from Albania, Romania, Nigeria, Pakistan and Bangladesh.

According to the Metropolitan Police a difference in culture has contributed in a significant way to the figures with an increase in "honour killings" within the Pakistani community and an increase in revenge murders stemming from village rivalries back in Albania.

The crimes are becoming ever more expensive to solve, with police often having to travel abroad to find suspects, liaise with foreign officials and deal with families who don't speak English.

Join the Trafalgar Club

MEMBERS of the TRAFALGAR CLUB make a real difference to the British National Party.

They pledge a minimum of £15 a month, in return for which they are entered into a prize draw every month, receive occasional special internal bulletins, and are entitled to attend the annual club dinner free of charge.

In addition every fully paid up first year member receives a TRAFALGAR CLUB tie (or personalised organiser file for ladies). The tie carries the first two 'words' of Nelson's semaphore signal before the Battle of Trafalgar - "England Expects". Second year members receive a fine enamel badge and third year members a specially-designed umbrella.

BNP top 20% in last two council elections of 2007

SHEPshed: Julia Green and Martin Foster arrive at the count on 20th December.

IN THE last round of local elections in 2007 the British National Party's quiet revolution continued apace in Leicestershire and Essex.

In East Ward in Shepshed, Labour gained two seats from the Tories and the BNP pushed the Lib-Dems into 4th place on Party percentages.

In St Mary's Ward in Benfleet last May it was just a straight fight between the Tories and Labour, with the victorious Conservative candidate polling 1129 to her opponent's 524.

This time the Tory vote collapsed, the Labour vote held firm and the BNP came from nowhere to take 20% of the votes cast.

Less than a week before Christmas and with a desperately low voter turnout, the BNP managed to compete with the campaigns of the three main parties and secure a share of the vote which shows we have significant support in these two areas.

And voters in Benfleet and Shepshed didn't just get leaflets from the candidates contesting the election, they HARROW in North West London is one of the worst boroughs in the capital for the British National Party.

At the last GLA elections, the BNP polled just 1.6% of the vote, so for the Canons Ward by-election there last month, local activists had no illusions that they faced a difficult election.

"We decided to stand a candidate in Canons Ward to spread our message of hope to the beleaguered British people of Harrow," London organiser Nick Eriksen told Freedom.

"Our candidate was retired engineer Howard Studley, who has lived in Harrow all his life and is unhappy with the way the area has changed, the level of crime and the exorbitant increase in council tax by the Tory council."

HOWARD STUDLEY: Harrow has changed beyond recognition.

Two nasty smear leaflets put out by our opponents might have deterred some support and the mere 20% turnout showed that many voters just stayed at home. But despite the low vote Nick Eriksen said he was quite satisfied.

"Our vote is increasing right across London. From those areas where we are well-established such as Barking to what seem unpromising territories like Harrow."

ELECTIONS MAY 2008

The British National Party made further progress along the road to gaining more political influence within our country with a very good set of local election results on May 3rd 2007. Now it is vital that we build on these gains. Next May there are the all-important London Assembly and London Mayor elections as well as another round of local elections. Funds are desperately needed to help finance this 'push for power'. Please help us all you can.

British National Party WHERE WE STAND

CRIME: A crack-down on crime with more 'Bobbies on the Beat'. Tougher treatment of criminals, including the return of the death penalty for child killers and terrorists. Zero tolerance for drug-dealers and violent thugs.

IMMIGRATION: An end to immigration and the scandal of bogus asylum seekers flooding Britain. Use the billions now wasted in foreign aid to fund generous 'Homeward Bound' schemes to encourage immigrants to return to their land of ethnic origin.

INDUSTRY: British ownership and control of British industry and resources, including the mass media. Protection of British jobs and industry by selective exclusion of foreign manufactured goods from the British market.

HEALTH: We will use the vast sums of money now wasted on funding our membership of the EU for the restoration of an effective national health service and proactive measures to produce a healthier population in the first place.

EUROPEAN UNION: British withdrawal from the European Union to restore Britain's freedom. We will trade with Europe where it benefits Britain, but want no political ties or monetary union.

EDUCATION: A return to traditional methods of education, with stronger discipline in the classroom and an end to 'trendy' teaching methods which have failed our children so badly.

ENVIRONMENT: A healthy environment for a healthy people - the protection of our countryside; a ban on greenfield-site house building except in exceptional cases of genuine local need, an end to field trials of GM crops and restoring our 200 mile fishing limit.

FAIR PLAY FOR ENGLAND: The setting up of an English Parliament to give England the same right of self-determination within the UK as enjoyed by Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

GOVERNMENT & COMMUNITY: The establishment of a government that puts British interests first. A return to healthy moral values and policies aimed at strengthening the family and community. Tough penalties for corruption in public life.

FREEDOM: A massive expansion of freedom and democracy to roll back the erosion of our traditional freedoms and truly reflect the wishes of the people. The adoption of popular referenda and high technology direct democracy.

DEFENCE: An alternative defence strategy based on the principle of armed neutrality. No British blood should be shed in conflicts which do not involve British interests. The restoration of the County Regiment system and the reversal of defence cuts which have weakened our Armed Forces and cost thousands of jobs.

REMEMBER! It doesn't matter if you don't agree with us on every last thing. Like all other democratic political parties, the BNP includes some members who disagree with one or two policies. Just ask yourself whether you agree with more of our policies than those of the other parties. Most people do, which is why we are the fastest growing political party in Britain today.

Triumph jobs in doubt despite increased profit

AS THE storm clouds gather over the shattered remnants of Britain's once proud manufacturing industry, there appears to be one small ray of sunlight breaking through the gloom.

Triumph Motorcycles, the Hinckley-based company, has reported a 20% increase in annual operating profits to £12.6 million.

Turnover rose by 10% to £200 million after selling 41,125 motor cycles, which was a 10% increase on the previous year.

The launch of the Triumph Tiger in late 2006 and top selling models including the Daytona 675 (which scooped the Masterbike and Supertest award for the second year running), Speed Triple and Rocket III all contributed to this success.

In the past six months Triumph has launched two more models, the Street Triple and the Rocket III Touring.

Older British people will remember the magnificent machines of the 1960's, an era when there were many British motorcycle manufacturers.

Starting from the Tiger Cub, the range grew through the 'Bathtub' 350 to the Tiger 100 and the Bonneville, these all being very successful and much loved marques and now all highly regarded by classic collectors. Sadly, the future of motorcycle production in Leicestershire is still very much in doubt.

It is the new factory that Triumph opened last year in Thailand that has contributed to the company's increased profit margins - and that might just be a sign of the times.

First it's our jobs - now it's our training places

NEW training places, created to help boost the skills of the British workforce, could be taken by migrant workers.

The Government claims that 400,000 apprenticeships and 500,000 places on technician training courses are to help British workers who need to improve skills in order to obtain better paid work.

But economists, who warned that the majority of new jobs created have been taken by immigrants, are now forecasting that many of the new training places created will also be taken by migrant workers.

EU change to stop shoppers supporting local producers

THE European Union wants to scrap food labels which say 'Made in Britain' and replace them with ones which state 'Made in the EU'.

It would mean that British shoppers would no longer have any idea where their food had come from.

It is not the first time the idea has been promoted - it was put forward in 2004 but was axed after a storm of protest from local producers and the public.

This time the idea has been mooted by Cypriot health commissioner Markos Kyprianou, who denied it was a deliberate ploy to prevent shoppers knowing where the food came from so they couldn't support local producers.

Tories follow Labour and 'soundbite' BNP policies to try to win over voters

by Steve Johnson

FIRST it was Gordon Brown who tried to steal British National Party employment policy with his "British Jobs for British Workers" soundbite at the Labour Party Conference.

It's a policy he knows he would have to take Britain out of the European Union to implement, and so he has no intention of carrying it out.

Now David Cameron has tried to jump on the BNP bandwagon as well, this time on industrial ownership.

Last month the Tory boss proclaimed to the media that he was launching a Conservative Co-operative Movement to promote shared ownership and workers' co-operatives.

Now that's a policy which British nationalists were advocating thirty years ago and then we were attacked by Tories like Norman Tebbit as being 'socialist' for doing so.

There is of course nothing socialist about distributing the ownership of factories and shops amongst those who work in them. It is something which you can see in action in your High Street at every branch of John Lewis and Waitrose. And it's very successful too with the company owned and controlled by its workforce as a co-op, proving itself the most successful and profitable department store chain in Britain.

But extending this idea widely - as "The Conservative Party's multinational & corporate backers just wouldn't tolerate shared ownership and workers' co-operatives."

TORY CON: John Lewis is a company owned and controlled by its workforce, such co-operative ownership is a core plank of the economic policy of the British National Party. (Inset: Hilaire Belloc).

Cameron and his Conservative Co-op chairman Jesse Norman claim they want to do, would challenge the multinational corporate limited liability shareholder economic ownership philosophy that has driven the Tories and their City sponsors for the last century. They are no more going to do that than Labour are going to get Britain out of the European Union. Both parties are just stealing nationalist slogans to try to win over voters. But the fact that the two main parties are paying lip service to our policies is flattering - and shows how seriously they now take us. But it's just posturing. The empty echoing of slogans neither party believe in just to steal voters from the BNP.

To the British National Party such policies are the core planks of an ideology that goes back, in the case of co-operative ownership, to such forebears of British nationalism as G.K. Chesterton, Hilaire Belloc and other distributists almost a hundred years ago.

Unlike Labour and the Tories, the BNP actually means what it says. Unlike Brown and Cameron, Nick Griffin still says it when the TV cameras are turned off and he will implement the radical changes to make it happen.

Policies such as British jobs for British workers and co-operative ownership are central to British National Party ideology and not throwaway lines just used to win over voters.

Labour fuels the rise as City sharks push up petrol prices

"The BNP will reduce fuel tax to compensate for higher petrol prices driven up by international financial speculators"

THE Government's fuel tax policy has made the effect of City speculators pushing up the price of crude oil far worse for motorists at the petrol pump.

When the price of a litre of unleaded reached £1 in November, only 35p of that was being paid to the oil company and the garage. The rest went to the Treasury in tax.

50.4p of every £1 you pay for petrol goes in fuel duty and 17.5p in VAT. And that was made even worse when the Government slapped on an extra 2p a litre in duty back in October.

The increase has hurt the ordinary motorist, but the effects are worse on people for whom the price of fuel is crucial to earning a living - such as farmers and small road hauliers.

Fuel costs for the average farmer with 500 acres have gone up by £10,000 in the last two years.

The price of diesel bought by Road Haulage Association members in bulk has gone up from 73.9p a litre to 87.8p. Jack Semple, the organisation's Policy Director, observed that "the anger and frustration among our members is rising as fast as the price of diesel".

VICTIM: Any increase in fuel prices hits Britain's farmers hard.

THE PRICE OF PETROL: Half of it is fuel duty to the Government.

Once again New Labour only seems interested in sucking up to City speculators, while ignoring the plight of ordinary working folk who it hits time and time again in the pocket.

In the short term, taxes need to come down to compensate for higher fuel prices driven up by City slickers. In the long term, these speculators need to be stopped - and that will require radical financial policies.

Realistic alternatives to the motor car need to be developed to help ordinary people get about and at a cost they can afford - and that will require radical transport policies.

At the same time as farmers and small businessmen need to be encouraged, the influence of financial markets and multinational corporations must be curtailed - and that will require radical economic policies.

Radical policies that only the British National Party can implement.

Betting on a price rise

THE PRICE of petrol at the pumps has been driven up not by a shortage of supply, or by fears for that supply caused by America's military adventures in the Middle East - but by City speculators.

The latest price rise has been caused entirely by City "hedge funds", placing multi-million-pound bets that petrol prices will rise. These bets - called "commodity price futures" - often cause what they bet on to actually happen.

How the price of oil could be driven up by speculation was realised by Goldman Sachs analyst Arjun Murti. He announced that by canny betting on the futures markets, he and his fellow speculators could push up the price of oil.

Following his lead, commodity speculators for the three hedge funds AHL, Aspect Capital UK and Winton Capital Management were able to use more than £15 billion from the funds that they control to raise the price of oil.

The scam netted hedge fund bosses even more millions in bonuses and all of it paid for by the motorist at the petrol pump.

Hospital beds turned five times a day for Muslim patients

by Louise Scott

ALREADY overworked nurses in Britain's hospitals have been given a new, five-times-daily chore - that of turning the beds of Muslim patients to face Mecca. And as well as having to turn the beds, the nurses must provide Muslim patients with regular fresh water for washing. The new move has created "turmoil" among staff at the Mid-Yorkshire NHS Trust, but Trust bosses say it must be instigated to ensure that Muslims have a comfortable stay in hospital. The cost of training the nurses to comply with Islamic practice will be met, as usual, by the taxpayer. At the moment, the Dewsbury and District Hospital is the only one implementing the idea, but other hospitals are expected to follow in the new year.

BURKAGOWN: So staff can't see the face of the Muslim patient.

Last year, some hospitals introduced burka-style gowns to be worn by patients in surgery so that medical staff could not see their face as they operated on them or cared for them. Many people have criticised the new scheme, saying that the regular moving around of beds causes disruption for non-Muslim patients. But this hasn't deterred Muslim groups in Yorkshire who also want Muslim women patients to be seen only by female doctors and staff trained for a better understanding of Islam which they say will improve the service offered to Muslims by the Trusts. One member of staff at the Dewsbury and District Hospital was unimpressed by the new policy. She said: "The money wasted on such training would be better spent on the battle against hospital superbugs or to provide treatment to those who are denied life-saving cancer drugs."

HODGE'S HUSBAND HALTS DEPORTATION Civil liberties of 'asylum' rapist keeps him in Britain

MEET THE HODGES: Henry allows serial sex offender from Sierra Leone to stay in Britain while his wife Margaret, speaks at an anti-BNP rally to try to have the voice of the British people silenced.

ASERIAL sex offender and burglar from Sierra Leone, whose application for British citizenship has been refused, is to be allowed to stay in Britain. When Mohammed Kendeh was released from his latest spell in youth detention for sex crimes, immigration tribunal judge Sir Henry Hodge, the husband of Labour minister and Barking MP Margaret Hodge, said he could stay in Britain because sending him back to the country he came from would "breach his Human Rights". Despite being only 16 years old,

Kendeh was already under a "supervision order" for six previous sex offences and had just been released from a youth detention centre when he attempted to rape Gabrielle Browne in Burgess Park, Camberwell in March 2003 - the same park in which he had committed his other crimes. Mrs Browne fought him off and bravely agreed to testify against him in court. But her assailant had a good lawyer, paid for by the British taxpayer, who persuaded him to plead guilty on the first day which got him a lenient sentence of just two years in youth detention. The judge did however recommend that Kendeh be sent back to Sierra Leone when he had served his sentence but this was blocked by an immigration tribunal despite Kendeh having no other claim to stay here, being born in Sierra Leone, a citizen of that country and whose application for British citizenship in 2000 had been rejected. Police had told the tribunal judge Sir Henry Hodge, that Kendeh was a danger to the public, yet he nonetheless turned him loose and since then he has carried out several more sex attacks and attempted rapes. His admitted tally of sex crimes now stands at 11! So now another spell in a British prison awaits this West African citizen. There he will be fed, lodged and looked after all, at the taxpayers' expense after which, thanks to the likes of Sir Henry Hodge, he will be unleashed once again on the long-suffering British public.

Tory Council re-houses convicted paedophile three streets from his victim!

NO RESPONSE: BNP campaigners contacted officials at Havering Town Hall to ask for help for the family but none was forthcoming.

THE British National Party in Havering in Essex has been campaigning on behalf of a victim of sexual abuse and her family after the paedophile who abused her as a young girl was re-housed near to their home. Havering Council re-housed the assailant on his release from prison, a mere three roads away from his young victim, who now has to face the worry of meeting him on a daily basis. All the various agencies involved with looking after the family since their ordeal have agreed that they urgently need to be re-housed. The police, the probation services, social services and the family's doctor are all concerned about their welfare and are at a loss as to why they are being treated in this way by their council. But the Tories at Havering Town Hall just don't seem to care. The family approached the BNP to see if the Party could help and Mark Logan, the secretary of Havering BNP, told Freedom of their efforts:

"We wrote to Barry Kendler, the borough's Housing Manager, but received no response. "We wrote to Michael White, the Conservative leader of the council, but received no response. "We wrote to Cheryl Coppell, the council's Chief Executive, but received no response. "We wrote to Chris Wade, the council's Customer Services Manager. A meeting did take place but no help was offered. "We contacted Yvette Cooper, the Housing Minister, but she said she was too busy to deal with individual cases." Eventually Havering BNP did gain some very welcome support from the well respected radio station, Time 107 FM, which carried an extensive interview with Mark Logan on the appalling treatment the family had received. Now that the BNP has been able to direct the media's attention to the family's plight it's hoped that the council will be forced into action.

Gun gangs march in Moss Side

POLICE seem to be losing the battle against black gun crime in the Moss Side in Manchester. At the beginning of December more than 250 officers raided the homes of suspected gang members as part of a national day of action against gun gangs. But just days later an 'army' of 25 men all dressed in black and carrying guns marched through Manchester streets in the middle of the afternoon firing shots into the air. Even Chief Supt. Dave Keller, Moss Side's top policeman, was forced to admit that the show of strength was "alarming." Earlier this year, nine shots were fired in Rusholme after a group of about 10 men marched through the streets and spent cartridges were found near a primary school.

Steve's scrapped for being too White

THE Metropolitan Police's new mascot PCSO Steve has been scrapped because it's "too white, too male and too blond". Instead there will be three new mascots, including one called Sunita, to form the Safer Neighbourhood Team which will tour schools across London from 2008. This comes after the creation of the Met's Diversity and Citizen Focus Directorate to tackle issues relating to "race and gender" in the mascot division. There will be £600 spent on designing the mascots and £14,400 spent on uniforms for each member.

The delegates have their say ...

BLACKPOOL 2007

The British National Party's Annual Conference

16th-18th November

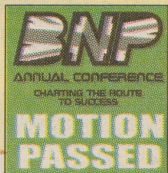

... and make their decisions

MOTION 1:

This conference believes that BNP policy should be to abolish the use of automatic number plate recognition cameras and vehicle tracking transponders for the use of traffic policing.

This is not simply a question of 'motorists' rights' as opposed to law enforcement, but rather a fundamental question of freedom, privacy and the relationship between the Citizen and the State.

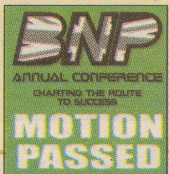

option for judges when dealing with dealers, and that stricter sentences should be passed on users.

MOTION 3:

This conference believes that hard labour is preferable to corporal punishment as a penalty for criminal offences. Such labour would be paid, but all payments would go to the victim rather than the offender. This would enable victims to receive compensation paid for by the offender, with the sentence being determined by the amount of compensation appropriate to the offence.

MOTION 4:

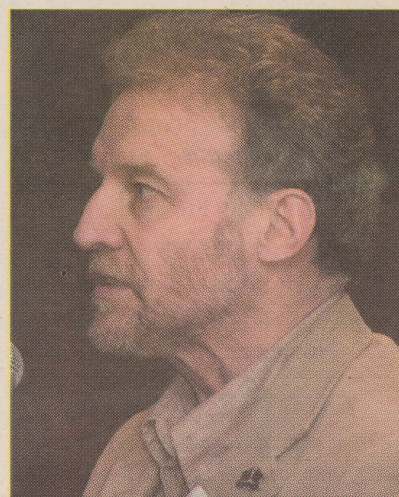

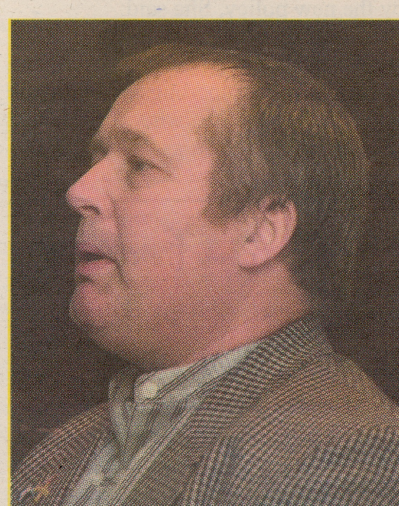

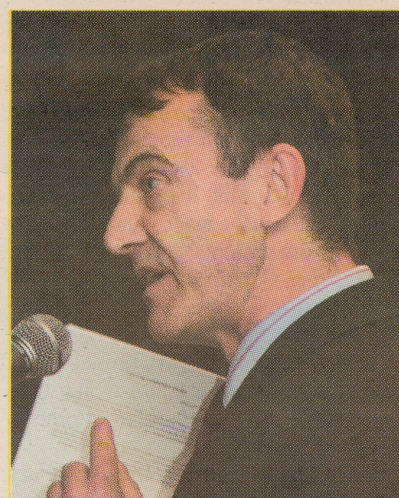

This conference believes it should be BNP policy for the immediate and permanent deportation of any foreign national found guilty of any criminal offence against British wildlife.

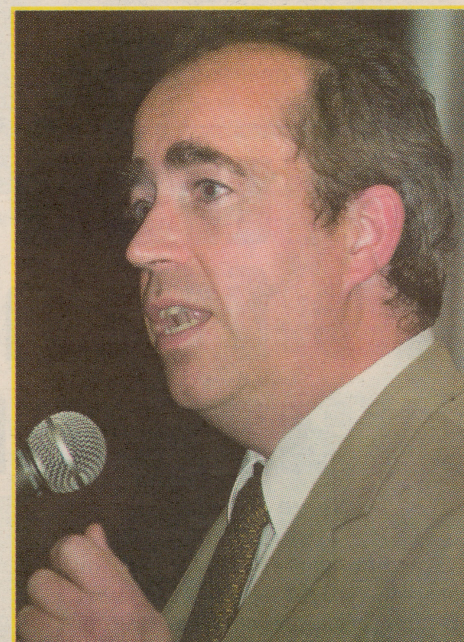

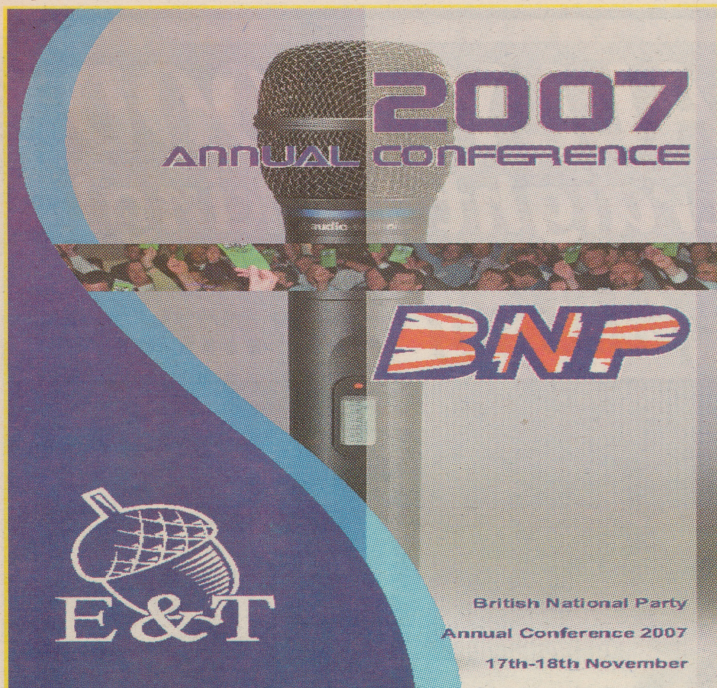

This is due to the continued decimation of British freshwater fish stocks and wildfowl by newly arrived "asylum seekers" and eastern European migrant workers. Urgent action is needed by environmental and law enforcement agencies if we are to avert irreparable damage to some of our most fragile and precious natural habitats.

MOTION 5:

This conference deplores the fact that our country's taxation system is grossly inequitable - unfairly favouring 'the haves' at the expense of 'the have-nots'. This Conference believes that, in principle, a progressive and direct tax is preferable to a regressive and indirect tax. Under the present system the poorest third of our citizens pay a much larger proportion of their income in tax than the richest third. This cannot be right, and, as nationalists, we believe that economic justice is an essential element in the construction of a socially cohesive and strongly patriotic society.

This conference therefore resolves to shift a major portion of the burden of taxation, from those who can least afford to pay, to those who can most easily afford to pay.

To this end it is resolved that a future British National Party government shall:-

- 1) Completely abolish VAT, saving billions of pounds in administration and collection costs, as well as more billions of pounds currently lost through organised fraud;
- 2) Introduce a 'food miles' tax, specifically targeting the supermarkets, whereby they will pay a levy on imported produce, on a sliding scale, according to the distance travelled from source to British port of entry - small retailers to be exempt.

MOTION 6:

This conference believes that Great Britain has some of the strictest gun laws in the world and yet the vast majority of gun crime is committed by criminals rather than licensed gun owners.

We believe that British National Party policy should be to introduce tougher sentences for gun crime and illegal possession of weapons and ammunition and that the law enforcement authorities should concentrate resources on the criminals rather than legitimate gun owners and users.

As such, we believe that British National Party policy should also be to restore to legitimate and law-abiding gun owners the right to possess and use all the varieties of firearms they were entitled to before New Labour's 1997 gun-grab.

MOTION 7:

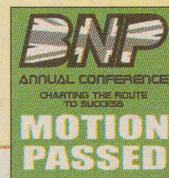

This conference believes that the second chamber in the Houses of Parliament (still for traditional reasons to be called the House of Lords) should be constituted as follows:

- 1) Half should consist of delegates roughly proportionately from the four national Parliaments (of England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland) and these assemblies should be elected by proportional representation).
- 2) The other half should consist of delegates from the parishes of our traditional counties and urban boroughs - nominees as outlined in the Local Government Manifesto. This would tie our devolved system into the Union and give national importance and influence to our vital local communities.

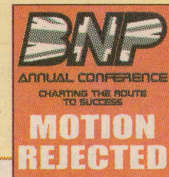

MOTION 8:

This conference believes in the restoration of the sanctity of the secret ballot in elections in Britain, whereby voters must present themselves in person at the designated polling station to cast their vote by hand on the day of the poll. The scrapping of other forms of voting practices including internet based voting and extended voting. Postal voting should be used as it was ten years ago. The conduct of elections in Britain must not only be beyond reproach, it must also be seen to be so.

MOTION 9:

This conference resolves that at each conference the Voting Membership shall appoint a scrutiny panel who shall act as lay auditors.

New Labour's incredible shrinking armed services

IN THE ten years since New Labour came to power, more British Servicemen have been sent to war in the interests of foreign governments, to countries further removed from any conceivable British national interest, than at any time since the end of the Empire.

Tony Blair and Gordon Brown have sacrificed the lives of British servicemen and women in these foreign conflicts, not in the interests of the British people but to puff up their own status on the world stage. And all the while through lack of funding and plummeting morale they have managed to shrink our Armed Services to their smallest size for centuries.

Ten years ago the Army had over 107,500 personnel and 415 tanks. Now it has 99,300 in its ranks and 280 tanks. In 1997, the RAF had 54,200 personnel and 264 combat aircraft. Now it has 40,800 personnel and 156 warplanes.

A decade ago the Senior Service had 41,700 in its ranks and 38 major warships. Today the Royal Navy has 34,800 personnel and just 22 major war vessels. It is the smallest Navy Britain has had since well before the Battle of Trafalgar.

With further cuts on the way as money budgeted to maintain Britain's defences is squandered at a rate of almost £2 billion a year in the deserts of Iraq and the mountains of Afghanistan, further cuts are now inevitable... and then who will defend our people and our homeland?

British forces sent to fight America's wars on the cheap

by Steve Johnson

ALMOST half of Britain's Armed forces are unfit for active duty because they are short of vital equipment, according to a Ministry of Defence report published at the end of last year.

The MoD report revealed that because of lack of equipment, 42% of our military units faced "critical or serious weaknesses" in their readiness to deploy on active service. 35% of our armed forces admitted they could not even meet their basic peacetime requirements - and were under equipped even for garrison duty. Paratroopers were sent to fight in Afghanistan in April after having only had six machine-gun-equipped Land Rovers to train with, instead of the 110 they should have had.

There are only six Challenger 2 battle tanks left to train with in Britain because the rest have been cannibalised to provide spares for those guarding America's oil supply in Iraq. Even Princes William and Harry were unable to train in the Household Cavalry because of a shortage of Scimitar armoured vehicles. Their elite armoured unit was reduced to considering approaching military vehicle preservation societies to buy some old fighting vehicles back!

The RAF is reduced to Paratroopers had just six machine gun equipped Land Rovers on which to train.

taking some of its planes apart to find spare parts to keep the rest in the air, the MoD report revealed. Between June 2006 and May this year Hercules C130 transport planes were cannibalised in this way 937 times, Harrier ground attack planes 1105 times, Tornado warplanes 2048 times and helicopters nearly 300 times. Even when actually in the field fighting the wars for foreign Government's in which Blair and Brown, egged on by the Tories, have sent them face death - our fighting men are neglected. Which is why the commander of British paratroops in Afghanistan, Lieutenant-Colonel Stuart Tootal, 42, resigned his commission, expressing his disgust at how the Government had left his men "poorly treated and under-equipped".

Out-dated Pumas put our air crews at risk

by Louise Scott

FIRST it was the Nimrod MRA which was causing concern, and now it's the RAF's Puma helicopters after a mystery crash while on exercise in Iraq.

An RAF Puma helicopter crashed near Baghdad, killing two SAS commandos and injuring two other military personnel. Experts do not believe that the crash was caused by enemy or friendly fire and point to the possibility of mechanical failure. The Puma is the oldest helicopter operated by the RAF, and Gordon Brown has already faced a grilling over the age of the aircraft involved in the crash - which was believed to be even older than the crew members on board.

Chinook helicopters, which were meant to systematically replace the Puma, were last ordered by John Major's Conservative Government for use by the special forces more than ten years ago. The Puma was developed in France by Sud Aviation, to meet a requirement by the French Army, and was selected in 1967 by the RAF, which resulted in the aircraft being manufactured jointly with Westland Helicopters.

SALLY WOOD Straight talking!

By-passing the media

● CITY HALL: Brenda Stern tackles Ken Livingstone over Lee Jasper.

WHAT a wonderful tool of mass communication the Internet is. No longer can our media masters dictate what we hear and read for today, thanks to the World Wide Web, they are no longer our sole source of information.

Take the recent confrontation between Brenda Stern and Ken Livingstone at a press conference at City Hall for example. An incident which has been totally ignored by the BBC, but which can be followed in detail on the Evening Standard website.

Brenda Stern was the programme manager for the London Development Agency who protested about the extortionate deal proposed for the Diversity International organisation. This entailed allowing it a further grant of £250,000 after it had already received £345,000 and had then promptly gone into liquidation.

For her protests she was suspended by Lee Jasper, but according to the London Mayor none of his political appointees are allowed to issue any such form of directive to another member of staff.

There is however, for all to see in millions of rooms up and down the land, the leaked e-mail of 25th June 2006 from Lee Jasper to Manny Lewis, the Chief Executive of the LDA, saying:

"Send her back to BLP" (the lawyer's firm she had originally worked for). There are several other incriminating e-mails, some with courtesy copies sent to senior Mayoral aides, making it hard to believe that Red Ken did not know what was going on.

Andrew Gilligan of the Evening Standard has investigated the funding scandal and found that £2.5 million of City Hall money has been paid to organisations controlled by Lee Jasper's friends and associates.

Voters will have the opportunity in May to rid London of this vipers' nest of corruption at the heart of the city's politics. They will have the chance to vote for the only party that will stand up for true Londoners - the British National Party.

Our lost Sundays

● TRADITIONAL: Attending church and cricket on the village green.

MY local council has decided to start charging for parking at its Mear parks on a Sunday.

As this will affect the congregation of the parish Church who use one of the car parks on a Sunday morning, the Vicar wrote to the council to request an exemption. It seems however that the council have already received requests from other faith communities for exemptions for their worshippers on Friday and Saturday as well as Sunday and they cannot agree to give to the one without giving it to the others also.

For those who still live in the cosy belief that we live in a Christian country, then this has to be a sharp wake-up call. For there is no doubt that although this country has been for much of its recorded history solely Christian, now our main religious day is afforded by the authorities no more significance than those of other faiths.

The local council is actually Tory-run and it seems that the Conservative Party has moved a long way from the time when it was known my many as "the Church of England at prayer."

But we have only ourselves to blame for the loss of our traditional Christian Sunday. When the influx of immigrants arrived here from the Indian sub-continent and flagrantly flouted our Sunday trading laws, there was no attempt at enforcement, with the result that pressure built up from British traders to relax the law. Now you are more likely to see our people coming out of Tesco's on Sunday than out of Church.

I appreciate that not everyone wishes to attend Church on a Sunday, and I would not like to see it become a day such as that depicted by Tony Hancock, when one gradually sinks into despondency through boredom.

But do we really need to shop seven days a week when stores are now open later during the week, and then there's the additional availability of Internet shopping? How nice it would be to have that one day a week without HGVs thundering along our motorways.

Our Christian Sunday has insidiously been taken from us and I believe we are all the poorer for it.

Gold Badge members for 2008 to top last year's total

AFTER just a few weeks of British National Party membership renewals flooding into the BNP's Membership Department, there are already confident predictions that Gold Badge members for 2008 will top last year's total.

Gold Badge members choose to pay double their £30 membership fee in order to give the Party extra funds at this most important time of the year. In return for this generous gesture the BNP gives the member a special gold badge to show its appreciation.

'Bhutto' queued to get tickets to hear Nick Griffin

THE new leader of the Pakistani People's Party, Bilawal Bhutto Zardari, has revealed that he was unable to hear Nick Griffin, the leader of the British National Party speak at the Oxford Union.

The 19 year-old who was plunged into the headlines last month after the assassination of his mother Benazir Bhutto in Pakistan is a first year student at Christ Church College, Oxford.

BILAWAL BHUTTO: Disappointed not to hear Nick Griffin speak.

According to the Daily Telegraph when he arrived in Oxford he was bombarded with offers for all sorts of societies but his primary interest was to join the Oxford Union.

He spends hours at the Union listening to debates and his main area of interest is politics. The newspaper reported:

"He was particularly keen to get into the Union debate in November involving the BNP leader, Nick Griffin, but like all students had to queue up for his ticket and missed out due to the high demand for seats."

Bilawal Bhutto Zardari is a member of the Faculty of History. He spent his first term studying British history, and will return to study general history.

He will be hoping in time, to follow in his mother's footsteps and become the Union President, and until he graduates in 2010 and takes over the full time role of leading the PPP, he hopes to lead as normal a student life as possible.

British Antarctic survey warns of melting glaciers

BBRITISH Antarctic Survey (BAS) scientists using Europe's ERS satellites to track the flow rate of over 300 'ice rivers' have concluded that Antarctic Peninsula glaciers are melting faster than ever before!

Reporting in The Journal of Geophysical Research, the BAS scientists have calculated that this group of glaciers alone is currently contributing about 0.05 mm a year to global ocean height. One warned:

"The Antarctic Peninsula has experienced some of the fastest warming on Earth, nearly 3C over the last half-century. 87% of its glaciers have been retreating during this period and now we see these glaciers are also speeding up."

An earlier study by BAS scientists utilised more than 2,000 aerial photographs dating from 1940, and a further 100 satellite images from the 1960s onwards, to measure the change in the position of glacier fronts over time. The study concluded that the vast majority of glaciers are in retreat.

The latest findings would seem to indicate that the cause of the flow-rate increase is the result of melting of the lower (coastal plain) glaciers, which flow directly into the sea. As they thin, the buoyancy of the ice is thought to lift the glaciers off their rock beds, allowing them to slide towards the sea faster - discharging more ice than previously.

In Greenland, surface melt waters are thought to be draining to the underside of landed ice, lubricating its movement towards the ocean. And, just like on the Antarctic Peninsula, it has been shown that the removal of floating ice shelves results in the speeding up of ice into the sea.

Furthermore, recent satellite studies suggest that global sea levels are rising by about 3mm a year, all of which supports the view that the global climate is warming up and that this century will witness a significant increase in sea-levels resulting in substantial losses of low-lying coastal land to the world's oceans.

GREENLAND: Ice on the move.

British toads under threat

BBRITAIN'S native toad species are at risk from an imported infection that has already eradicated many of the world's amphibian colonies.

Currently confined to the county of Kent, where it is thought to have been introduced from imported frogs, the disease could completely wipe out the British toad population according to research published in The Journal of the Royal Society.

Consequently environmentalists are urging tighter controls on the aquarium trade involving the importation of amphibians, to protect our native toads from infection.

Experts believe the chytrid fungus, or Batrachochytrium dendrobatidis, infects the skins of amphibians such as frogs, toads, salamanders and newts. Such is its potency that a full one-third of all the losses in amphibian species recorded around the world are thought to be due to the disease.

The wildlife charity Froglife said it was important to make people aware of the danger to native amphibians. A spokesman for the charity said:

"It is thought that it could have been brought to the UK by exotic pet species, such as the African clawed toad, that have escaped or been deliberately released. It is vital strict controls on the health of imported animals are in place to help limit the spread of this devastating disease."

UNDER THREAT: Britain's native toad.

TRUST IN NICK

FOR the past two years my editorial in the January issue of Freedom has warned of the onslaught that the British National Party will face in the run-up to the May local elections from our opponents and their friends in the media.

For the past two years the Party has weathered this storm very well indeed. In 2006 we achieved a stunning electoral success in Barking & Dagenham, getting twelve councillors elected in the face of a no holds barred campaign against us, financed by the Labour Party and TUC bosses. Last year there was a nationwide campaign against BNP candidates, once again funded by the usual suspects, and this time aided and abetted with massive free publicity provided by the Daily Mirror newspaper. Despite this, we still polled well and marginally increased our number of representatives.

This year is different because the rewards are that much greater. In London, should our candidates prove popular with the electorate across the whole of the capital and gain a significant level of support, the BNP could have two representatives elected to the GLA which would give the Party much more influence and credibility than even the election of our twelve councillors in Barking achieved.

But of course our enemies know this and they will be redoubling their efforts against us. Conservative Party Mayoral candidate Boris Johnson, has already warned Parliament of the possibility of a BNP breakthrough and the Labour MP for Dagenham Jon Cruddas, abused the parliamentary code of conduct to launch a bitter attack on the BNP just before Christmas.

In past years we have withstood the onslaught against us because the Party was united and the attacks against us came from enemies outside. This year again it is different.

In August, Nick Griffin was challenged for the leadership of the BNP by an extreme right-wing element within the Party that wanted to turn the clock back to the dark days of pre-1999. When Nick won a landslide 90% of the votes in the contest, it was hoped that this old guard would quietly drift away and let the Party get on with building on its incredible electoral success of the past five years.

Sadly this hasn't been the case and now, egged on by dissident siren voices, this tiny rump of old-style nationalists are trying to disrupt our campaigns for 2008 by fermenting internal disputes within the Party and attacking the leadership of Nick Griffin.

Our opponents, and their agents embedded within the BNP, are rubbing their hands with delight at this unexpected turn of fortune for them at this key time. They too are working to stoke the fires of uncertainty within the Party. Their aim is to confuse the membership which will divert the energy of our activists and lead to political inactivity potentially scuppering our election campaigns in May.

The British National Party is not the same as Labour, the Tories and the Lib-Dems for many reasons. But it is also unlike any of the other three parties because it has so many opponents with unlimited funds constantly attacking it and putting it on the defensive.

With so many enemies, on many different fronts, it is vital that the BNP has clear and concise leadership and that is what we get from Nick Griffin. At this difficult time we need to put our trust in a leader who will steer us through these troubled waters.

Emotion has no place in Party politics. It's performance that counts and since he took over the leadership of the BNP, Nick Griffin has taken this Party from an unelectable organisation stuck in the past, to a slick and professional political movement that has achieved great electoral success and is on the verge of a major breakthrough - and all in just eight years.

For me, that's a record that proves Nick Griffin's worth as our only credible nationalist politician and that is why I put my complete trust in him to win back our country for the British people.

CLOSING ADDRESS: British National Party chairman Nick Griffin, delivers a superb speech to the Party's Annual Conference in Blackpool. Drawing together many different strands, he listed the problems Britain would face in the coming years, outlining how these would lead the British people to look to the BNP for the solution.

Commonwealth Games

I SEE that Glasgow will stage the Commonwealth Games in 2014.

Readers will recall that the last Commonwealth Games held in Australia were opened by Aborigine children in a special ceremony commemorating Aboriginal history, culture and religion. This was, in effect, a public apology to the Aborigines for the destruction of their society and culture by immigration and for the ongoing problems which they face of unemployment, family breakdown, alcohol and drug abuse, and mental illness.

These same problems - caused when indigenous people are swamped by incomers who destroy the personal, family and social ties of a settled society - are now being seen on housing estates throughout Britain where the indigenous white working class have been herded by New Labour as it restocks the country in a mass colonialism unprecedented in our history.

Hence, may I suggest that in a gesture of reparation to the indigenous white races of Britain, the 2014 Games should be opened by indigenous children celebrating the few remaining shreds of our culture allowed to us by our new colonial masters?

John Maddox, London.

More biased reporting

THE bias of the media could not have been more evident than in the reporting of the mob chanting "Kill Luke Tryl" outside of Oxford University during Nick Griffin's address on free speech, and the protesters screaming for the death of Gillian Gibbons, for allowing her students to name a 'teddy-bear' Muhammad.

It should be considered highly irresponsible to differentiate between two identical and vicious mobs, yet it appears that it is completely acceptable to report uncritically on the mayhem outside one of our country's universities just because it involves a political party the media itself doesn't support. Both the Oxford Union president and BNP leader should have been protected by, "The Convention for the Protection of Human Rights Act 1998, Chapter 42, on Fundamental Freedoms, Article 10, Sec: 1. This is something that seemed to have been lost upon our prejudiced press who appear to be of the opinion that the anti-free speech thugs should have carried the day.

Sensible, unbiased journalism is in very short supply.

Peter C. Lucas, Torbay.

Give the BNP 'air time'

JUST before Gordon Brown announced to the nation the terms of his latest anti-terror Bill, the BBC gave a prime time interview to Muslim Council of Britain spokesman Inayat Bunglawala.

Yet, not once have I heard a British National Party spokesman given time on the BBC to give our viewpoint on any of the many issues that effect the British people today and where the BNP policies are radically different from that of any other party.

Has the BNP asked BBC for interviews on radio and television in order to present our the views? We should be receiving a similar amount of 'air time' to that given to Islamic spokesmen.

May I suggest that we make such representations and if refused, record the date and time of the request with reference to content and list it in Freedom.

When the number of times the BBC refuses to allow the BNP voice to be heard is made public, it will alert people to this bias and put pressure on the BBC to be more evenhanded with its treatment of our Party.

David Martin, Bridlington.

Carbon footprint

THE turmoil in Pakistan following the assassination of Benazir Bhutto has led to much media focus on the Pakistani community living in Britain.

Amongst the coverage was a report on BBC Radio 4 about the connection Pakistani families living in Britain still have with their homeland. I was stunned when a spokesman representing these families told the interviewer that many return to Pakistan three or four times a year! Now I was aware that many British Asian families take extended holidays back in the subcontinent but I had no idea that they made so many visits. This makes me wonder what sort of carbon footprint these families are leaving.

Us Brits are made to feel guilty for flying to Spain for two weeks in August, yet nothing is said or done about the pollution caused by travel between Britain and Pakistan. This is something that needs to be investigated.

Geraldine Powers, Manchester.

When things will change

OUR newspapers were quick to report a former president of the Royal College of Surgeons complain that white male doctors are being denied bonuses because of politically correct "reverse" discrimination by the National Health Service.

Doctors, however, have a skill that they can take with them if they emigrate, a luxury not afforded to the vast majority of working class people who have lost their jobs because of "cheap" labour coming in from overseas, or when our factories, paper mills and shipyards are closed down and re-located overseas. Yet the media has little inclination to report on the hardship felt by them.

Things will change only when the so called middle classes start to lose their jobs - Britain's solicitors, accountants, management executives, city traders, professors, teachers, newspaper editors and of course the top dogs in the media and entertainment industry.

It is then we will hear these types screaming like "stuck pigs" because they cannot afford a nanny, their regular winter holiday in the Caribbean, a four wheel drive car, and private health care. And at the same time we will, no doubt, also reading that the growth in the membership of the British National Party is breaking records each and every week.

John Waller, email.

Cameron & 'Freedom'

I'M delighted to be able to report that the leaders of the three main political parties are readily admitting to reading Freedom.

The Financial Times last month informed us:

"... with Mr Cameron accusing Mr Brown of copying "British jobs for British workers" from the front page of the British National Party's newspaper."

That must have been the October issue the Tory leader had been reading!

Tim Rait, Haslemere.

Staying on at school

SO the Government is raising the school-leaving age to eighteen.

Our young people, instead of joining the workforce are to remain at school, and after that half of them are to go on to university. How is the loss of personnel and impetus to our economy to be made good?

Why by importing manpower from Asia, Africa and Eastern Europe of course!

Gordon Clack, Gloucester.

Wedding bells sound for Richard & Simone

THE news that brightened up a rather bleak December was the announcement of the engagement between the British National Party's London Mayoral candidate Richard Barnbrook and Simone Clarke, the principal dancer with the English National Ballet.

The couple first met in January after Simone was targeted by anti-BNP protesters as she performed at the London Coliseum. Richard went along to show his support for the lady the media had dubbed the BNP ballerina. He met her backstage and handed her a bouquet of red roses and white lilies.

In November, the leader of the BNP in Barking and Dagenham, proposed to Simone as they enjoyed a candlelit meal in a South London restaurant.

Richard Barnbrook is an artist, lecturer and art teacher, but has worked full-time for the British National Party since dramatically winning his seat on Barking & Dagenham Council in May 2006 along with eleven other BNP representatives.

Simone was born in Leeds and educated first at the local Catholic school. At the age of ten she beat 4,500 others to win one of 23 places at the Royal Ballet School in London.

In 1988, after a stint with the Birmingham Royal Ballet, she joined the English National Ballet, rising to become senior soloist in 2000 and principal dancer in 2004. Her CV includes Juliet in Romeo and Juliet, Aurora in The Sleeping Beauty, Cinderella and the Sugar Plum Fairy.

NEW: Debbie Stafford is Cumbria's latest BNP councillor.

Debbie takes her seat on Wigton Council

DEBBIE Stafford is now representing the British National Party on Wigton Town Council in Cumbria.

Debbie, who is the wife of Allerdale BNP organiser Paul Stafford, was invited to join the council after helping in the campaign last year to keep the town's community centre open.

The local newspaper tried to make an issue of the appointment, but both the council and Debbie declined to make any comment.

WELL DONE: Gary Raikes with the award presented to him at a regional council meeting in Falkirk.

Gary's delighted with activist's runner-up award

GARY Raikes, a British National Party Scottish parliamentary and local election candidate was the runner-up in the BNP's annual Activist of the Year awards.

Competition came from BNP units across the UK so Gary was delighted to receive the award which was presented at a regional BNP council meeting held in Falkirk this month.

"To win the runner-up award out of all the many activists around Britain was a great boost to the Party across the border. We now have members willing to stand in every region of north east Scotland. The BNP will be standing in the European Election in 2009 as the only anti-EU party in Scotland that has a chance of winning a seat", Gary told his local newspaper in Moray & Gordon.

London Mayor campaign hits Grove Park

THERE was a Weekend of Action at the beginning of December when fifty British National Party activists helped promote Richard Barnbrook's London Mayor campaign in Lewisham's Grove Park Ward and Bromley's Mottingham Ward.

There were 35 activists on the Saturday in Grove Park, where around 10,000 leaflets were distributed and then 24 hours later 15 activists turned out to distribute another 5,000 leaflets in Bromley.

"It was a good two days which generated a lot of interest in the BNP," Richard Barnbrook told Freedom.

"We have an extensive campaign lined up for both the London Assembly and Mayor elections in May which will hopefully show a dramatic increase in support for our Party across the capital."

Pat Richardson speaks at Maldon BNP meeting

by Clive Godfrey

THE December meeting of Maldon BNP heard from Pat Richardson, the leader of the British National Party group of councillors on Epping Forest Council.

She detailed the lies and deceit of the Labour Government of the last ten years and warned that Gordon Brown's leadership would be just as oblivious to the needs of the British people as was Tony Blair's.

Julian Leppert, a BNP councillor on Redbridge Council, spoke on the huge responsibility resting on the shoulders of BNP councillors across the country and how his lone vote had been crucial in defeating an inappropriate and irresponsible planning decision for the Borough that was being pushed through.

BNP manager Arthur Kemp, who had also spoken in the afternoon at Redbridge and Epping meetings held a question and answer session with the enthusiastic audience before the collection raised £200.

Christmas bash raises funds for May elections

DESPITE quite horrendous weather conditions, over 200 Halifax British National Party members and supporters flocked to a town centre venue for the annual Christmas bash. A superb local band provided the entertainment for a lively and festive audience and the night provided a huge morale boost for the local branch with the funds raised going towards the campaign for May's local council elections.

Karen keeps the BNP flag flying in Prince's End councillor in Prince's End ward.

The by-election was forced after the councillor failed to turn up to six consecutive council meetings. This left the brave BNP candidate Karen Parkes, having to face the wrath of many disappointed voters.

Black Country organiser Ken Griffiths, while disappointed with the result, said the voting pattern wasn't that depressing with one usually solid BNP supporting estate just staying at home rather than switching votes to another party.

"The turnout overall was just 18% and on this estate it was just half that, showing residents' disillusionment with politics" Ken told Freedom.

"I believe that trust in the BNP can be rebuilt and we have already had a meeting of key activists to discuss the strategy for the next round of elections in May."

Penrith sees its first BNP day of action

by Clive Jefferson

PENRITH is the regional centre for the eastern Lake District, lying just outside the National Park. It's an attractive town which is the hub of the Eden Valley.

Penrith is also the final zone of the British National Party's planned expansion across Cumbria and during a day of action there at the beginning of December, BNP officials met local members and activists before holding a paper sale and mass leafleting session. The paper sale went particularly well and we received a number of donations and an encouraging number of people approaching us for literature and asking questions about the BNP.

The BNP in Cumbria now has active units in each of the six council zones in the county and to keep pace with our rapid expansion the North West region of the BNP are supplying Cumbria with its own printing equipment. Now we will be able to produce our own local leaflets, literally overnight to be out through letterboxes within 24 hours.

Edgar Griffin speaks in Shrewsbury

OVER sixty people, including several new members, attended December's meeting of Shrewsbury BNP and heard excellent speeches from Phil Reddall, James Whittall and Edgar Griffin.

Shrewsbury organiser Karl Foulkes, chaired the meeting and asked for candidates to come forward for the elections in May where the group hope to stand many more candidates than the four that stood in 2007.

Edgar Griffin, father of the BNP chairman, delivered a speech on the progress the Party has made electorally and in terms of membership, something the media had failed to acknowledge but could not do so for much longer. Members enjoyed a delicious buffet and a collection raised £122.

BNP papersale in Berwick prompts 'Advertiser' debate

AFTER the BNP held a successful paper sale and leafleting session in the border town of Berwick, the local newspaper, the Berwick Advertiser, carried a lively debate within its pages prompted by the activity.

In one exchange, Mr D. Smith replied to a letter from Joy Mitchell. He wrote: "Joy asked 'when are we going to bring our troops home?' and then attacked the only political party which are willing to do this - the British National Party."

"The BNP did indeed have a stall in the town centre on Saturday and apparently recieved a very positive response. It is not 'racist' as you suggest but the only political party ready to stand up for Britain and the British people."

"If elected the BNP pledge not only to bring our troops home but to ensure they never have to fight another war that has nothing to do with us again. Please Joy, before you call the BNP names take a good look at the BNP website www.bnp.org.uk and point out where there is any racism."

St Helens BNP hears of the campaign against heroin

by Graham Davies

OVER fifty members and supporters turned out for the latest meeting of St Helens unit of the British National Party which was the biggest and best to date.

The first speaker of the evening was Liverpool activist Paul Rimmer, who gave detailed analysis of the Labour Government's policy of enforced multiculturalism.

"The only hope for society today is a return to the traditional cohesive communities as advocated by the British National Party," he said.

After the buffet, the main address was given by Tony Bamber. He spoke on his campaign to tackle the heroin trade. He compared the misery of the victims today, drawn into hopeless addiction by the purveyors of the killer drug, to the helplessness felt by the victims of the slave trade of centuries ago.

Several new activists pledged their support to help with our campaigning after hearing the evening's presentations and a record amount of funds were raised with a collection and literature sales.

BNP activist presentation in Southend

THERE was standing room only at last month's Southend BNP meeting where local organiser Stuart Freeman, opened the meeting by presenting special certificates to leading activists in thanks for their hard work and dedication throughout a very hard year.

The evening's guest speaker Dr Peter Strudwick, received a standing ovation for his address in which he told the audience of his wasted 32 years in the Conservative Party. He said that he now realised only the British National Party could save our nation from extinction by standing up against immigration and the European Union.

Merton & Wandsworth BNP Remember

MEMBERS of Merton & Wandsworth BNP after attending the Remembrance Day parade in Mitcham.

60% membership increase in Horsham

DUE to membership increasing by over 60% in Horsham in the last year alone, Crawley and Horsham BNP now hold meetings in both Crawley and Horsham.

Last month Crawley and Horsham Branch organiser Richard Trower, opened proceedings on what was a very successful meeting in Crawley. To an attendance of 60 local members, Richard gave a report on the Holbrook by-election where the BNP achieved 12% of the vote, polling three times the Labour vote.

Donna Bailey then updated the audience on her continuing battle to be co-opted onto Upper Beeding Parish Council, where she faced opposition to taking her seat purely because of her political background.

The guest speaker was Richard Barnbrook, the leader of the BNP group on Barking Council who gave a passionate speech and answered questions from the audience. During the interval teas and coffees were served and a raffle drawn. With membership applications, literature sales and the collection, the overall income generated was £234.

BROXTOWE: A local rock covers band belted out the hits from U2, Green Day, The Killers and The Hives to an audience of over one hundred.

Christmas party raises funds for the European Elections

BROXTOWE BNP hosted a successful East Midlands Christmas Party which doubled up as a fundraiser towards the region's European Election fund.

Well over a hundred people supported the event which opened with a disco to warm-up the early arrivals. A temporary event licence was obtained to hold a BNP bar and this proved a great way of generating profit. It only cost £21 and the form was downloaded from the local council website.

Hot food was served from the hall's kitchen before the main event of the night, a local rock covers band took to the stage at 9pm. They belted out the hits from U2, Green Day, The Killers, The Hives and many other classic older and more modern tracks.

Everyone agreed it was a great night. There were around 40 people in attendance who were not members but local supporters interested to see what a BNP social was like. They were very suitably impressed and the local branch look like gaining more members as a result. Full credit must go to BNP councillors Dave and Nina Brown whose hard work ensured the whole event was a huge success.

Why Should Immigrants Have The Monopoly on Housing?

Why is it so many homes seem to go to asylum seekers or those from ethnic minority backgrounds?
Why is it that when young British couples go for a home they're put to the back of the list?
Why is it that the children of British families have to share bedrooms when new arrivals get homes with more space?

SOCIAL HOUSING

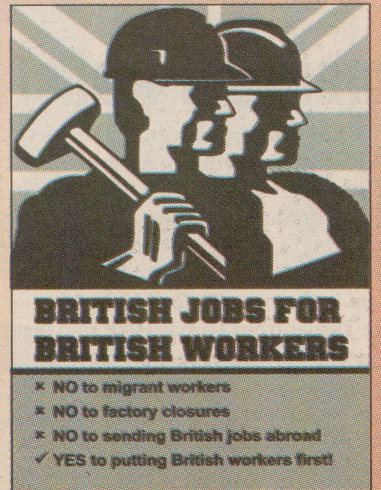

STOP THE BUILDING!

Our countryside is vanishing beneath a tidal wave of concrete, Labour, Lib Dem and the Tories all support building, greedily developers build up to 500,000 new houses every year for twenty years.
The politicians are even changing planning laws to allow them to build more houses faster than ever.
Central government will give the green light to 'brownfield' development.
The biggest reason all these new houses are 'needed' is immigration. One third of all new houses are for immigrants and asylum seekers. What of the rest will be taken up by the growing families of high income immigrants, and by 'white flight' from inner-city multicultural urban areas.
All the extra greenfield development means more building on flood plains, less home-grown food, less space and more congestion. All areas when built will be overcrowded and housing new and the whole world is facing growing food shortages. This is all other measures. Immigration is causing an environmental disaster.

Norfolk BNP's Christmas meal

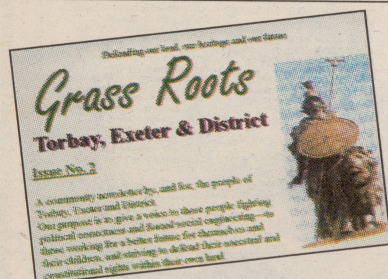

ON Friday 14th December fifty-five members and supporters attended Norfolk BNP's Christmas meal in Norwich.

The restaurant was exclusively booked and there was musical entertainment and a raffle which raised £114 for Party funds.

The meal was a great success and was followed by speeches and a toast to the Queen. Steve Ames of Norfolk BNP told Freedom:

"It was another successful activity for our group. Our membership is now rising quickly, and each time we have a social function more people attend."

"Meals are always very popular because they introduce members and guests to like-minded people."

Torbay BNP leaflet

A NEW British National Party leaflet is being distributed in Torbay and Exeter.

Locally produced, Grass Roots is a community newsletter designed to promote the British National Party in the run-up to the council elections in May. Mike Turner from Torbay BNP said that the newsletter had been well received. "It's a glossy, four page leaflet which mixes local and a little bit of national news. It is specifically designed to be different from the BNP election leaflets and is chatty as well as informative. We have 10,000 more ready to go out." Plymouth BNP were so impressed with Torbay's leaflet that they have produced their own Grass Roots for the city.

North Kirklees Christmas party

NORTH Kirklees BNP held its Christmas party in a friendly Dewsbury pub with special guests Kirklees councillors Colin Auty and David Exley.

As well as celebrating Christmas, the event was a big 'thank you' from the branch to its local activists who have leafleted and knocked on doors over the past 12 months to promote the British National Party.

The evening was a great success with 'Rocket Ronnie' keeping everyone entertained with a Christmas themed quiz and Sharon Towers providing the now traditional superb North Kirklees buffet. For the youngsters allowed to stay up, there was a visit from Santa Claus.

BUFFET: Thanks to Sharon Towers.

New BNP website launched for 2008

THE British National Party has an all-new website to help the Party meet the challenges of 2008.

Making the maximum use of the Internet has always been a priority for the BNP because the Party is censored and so misrepresented by the establishment media. The updated website helps fulfil this ambition with the sites new web pages matching and even bettering the traditional news and politics outlets.

The man behind the BNP's new site is the vastly experienced webmaster Simon Bennett.

He is a certified technology specialist (accredited by Infocomm) and also a certified internet webmaster. Simon has worked in the audio visual, conference, production and presentation industry since 1988, been managing director of two limited companies in that time and now runs a third. He was the first audio visual equipment sales company on the internet back in 1994 (www.A-V.com) and has run various successful e-commerce websites since then.

The British National Party has still, by far, the most popular political website in Britain and last month was presented as a Web Winner for 2007 in politics and current affairs by the Daily Telegraph. The newspaper had this to say of the BNP's website.

"They may not have a single MP but the British National Party's website is the most visited political party website in Britain, according to figures released in September. And emphatically so: the Hitwise online data company calculated that the BNP site gets seven times as many visitors as the Labour site and, three times more than the Conservatives."

CHRISTMAS PARTY: British National Party members in Canada meet to send a festive message to their colleagues back home in Britain.

Help from Canada is greatly appreciated

DAVE Bailey is a member of the British National Party living in Canada and over the past few months has been signing up a growing number of new recruits to the cause.

Just before Christmas, Dave held a small social gathering of Canadian BNP members:

"There were around 20 in attendance and a good time was had by all. Our group may be small but we are dedicated and we are growing," he told the BNP website in a special Christmas greeting from Canada.

BNP Membership Secretary Tina Wingfield, said she was delighted by the new members coming in from Canada.

"Dave's letters arrive sometimes containing up to six overseas memberships which at £55 a member is over £300. That is a vital boost to funds from an unexpected source."
